CHING'S WORM-DESTROYING LOZENGES have for sixty years held a distinguished reputation, and are still and increasingly patronised by the highest nenes in rank, respectability and science, from a personal knowledge of their utility in their own families. It is a fact established by the annual bills of mortality that one-half of the children born are cut off before statisning soven years of age, and the fruitful source of this mortality is found to exist in that foul state of the stomach and bowels which produces the generation of worms. As the safe restores of infantile health, in this critical state, many anxious mothers, who have successfully had recourse to these lozenges, can gratefully testify to their excellence.

M M. Saillard, from Mexico, arrived in Paris on Monday, and had an interview with M. Drouyn de Lhuys; and on Wednesday he had an audience with the Emperor. It has since been announced that the Emperor has secided that the French troops shall evacuate Mexico in three detachments, namely, in November of the present year, March, 1867, and November, 1867.

The differences between Austria and Prussia are more and more becoming extremely hostile and warlike. Both sides accuse the other of making preparation for war, thereby threatening the other, which as usual each desires in the first place, and then, in the second, declares that it is in consequence of the movement of the other. In Paris, publicly and privately, nothing else but "the approaching war "between these two countries is talked of, or thought about. The Constitutionnel declares that the attitude of France will be neutral—that God alone knows if it will be war, but that the Imperial Government has provided for all contingencies, and let what may happen France will not be found unprepared.

has signally failed, the various Governments declaring that the espousal of either side would be a direct contravention of the Federal laws.

The last note of Prussis to the Austrian Government is that she has taken note of the latter's assurance that she does not intend to attack Prussia, and declares that Prussia has no intention of attacking Austria. At the same time neither side gives way, or delays preparation for war, and all the stock markets of Europe are rendered sensitive to the highly critical and warlike appearance of affairs.

Her Majesty the Queen has addressed autograph letters to the Emperor of Austria and the King of Prussia, urging upon them the duty of avoiding war.

The marriage of the Princess Mary of Cambridge with Prince Teck of Wurtemburg has been quite arranged. In this case, as in that of the Princess Helena, the bridegroom is a Prince whose birth is not altogether Royal. Prince Christian of Schleswig-Holstein is, as is well known, the son of the Duke of Augustenberg by his marriage with a Danish lady, the Countess Danneskiold Samsoe. The marriage, however, being fully recognised by the laws of Denmark, the issue of it have always borne the title of Princes and Princesses of Augustenburg. The Prince of Teck, who is about to marry the Princess Mary of Cambridge, is the son of Duke Alexander of Wurtemburg by his marriage with a German lady, the Countess Hohenstein. By the German law this marriage was only recognised as a morganatic sne, and consequently the issue, consisting of one son and two daughters, only bore the title of Count and Countessess of Hohenstein, until 1863, when a Royal decree of the King of Wurtemburg conferred upon them the titles of Prince and Princesses of Teck. The Prince of Teck was born in 1837, and is consequently in his 29th year. He has two sisters, the Princess Claudine, one year his senior; and the Countess Amelia von Hohenstein, who was married at Vienna in 1863 to Baron von Hugel, a retired captain of cavalry in the Austrian service.

Mr. Peabody's reply to the letter of her Majesty the Queen of England, given last week, is as modest and unpretending as himself. He will treasure that letter as the proudest heirloom of his family.

The Palace Hotel, Buckingham Gate, London April 3. Madem,—I feel sensibly my inability to express in adequate terms the gratification with which I have read the letter which your Majosty has done me the high honour of transmitting by the hands of Earl Russell.

On the occasion which has attracted your Majosty's attention of setting spart a portion of my property to ameliorate the condition and augment the comforts of the poor of London, I have been actuated by a deep sense of gratitude to God, who has bleesed me with prosperity, and of attachment to this great country, where, under your Majosty's benign rule, I have received so much personal kinduess and enjoyed so many years of happiness.

Next to the approval of my own conscience, I shall always prize the assurance which your Majosty's testion has in no degree diminished her sympathy with the humblest of her subjects.

The portrait which your Majosty is graciously pleased to bestow on me I shall value as the most precious hericom that I can leave in the land of my birth, where, together with the letter which your Majosty has addressed to me, it will ever be regarded as an evidence of the Knidy feeling of the Queen of

To Her Majesty the Queen.

The Liberal party have had a meeting convened by Earl Russell. 286 members attended. His Lordship frankly admitted that the Government had taken the advice of Mr. Bright in regard to the Franchise Bill, just as Sir Robert Peel took that of Mr. Cobden with the Corn Laws, but that they sever intended to leave the redistribution of seats to a new Parliament as Mr. Bright had suggested. The Government would stand or fall by the vote of the House on the bill, but that they will bring in a bill for redistribution of seats immediately on the former passing the second reading. He declared that it was just and proper that the Government which passes the Franchise Bill should also pass that for the redistribution of seats. A meeting of the Conservative party has also been held, at which 230 members attended. The Earl of Derby was the chief speaker.

The Conferences at Paris on the subject of the Danubian Principalities, have been adjourned in consequence of the great diversity of opinion whick prevails amongst the Plenipotentiaries of the different Powers, but all, however, agree in the preservation of the Turkish Empire in its integrity, and the auserainty of the Porte over the Principalities.

The Bavarian Government has addressed the Coarts of Berlin and Vienna, carnestly beseeching them to avoid all hostile measures, and at once to open negotiations of peace.

The Federal Diet has held a special meeting at Prankfort, at the request of Prussia, upon the proposals of that Government for a general assembly, composed of members elected throughout Germany by universal suffrage, to meet to receive proposals of that Government for a general assembly, composed of members reform of the Federal Constitution.

The Secondary States of Germany are said to be resolved to demand of Prussia that she discontinue her armaments.

The Secondary States of Germany are said to be resolved to demand of Prussia that she discontinue her armaments.

Austria sent, en Saturday last, the 7th instant, a despatch to Prussia in the shape of an utismatum. It accuses Bismark of having declared that war with Austria was inevitable, and with intriguing with Italy against Austria. It demands the "demohilisation of the Prussian army, and that Austria has not to disarm because she has made no armaments—that in the event of an unfavourable reply she will at once apply to the Federal Diet to order that the Federal army be placed on a war footing.

The Crar has sent letters to the King of Prussia and Emperor of Austria expressing his desire for peace.

The reply of the Prussian Government to the Austrian note of the previous Saturday, namely, the 31st March, says that the Austrian armaments are caused by the attitude of Austria. It also declares that nothing is further from the King's intention than an offensive war against Austria.

In reply to the Austrian note of Saturday, the 7th instant, the Prussian Government gives a decisive refusal to the demand that she should withdraw the order for the mobilisation of the Prussian arm, that measure having been issued only as a defensive measure.

order for the mobilisation of the Prussian army, that measure having been issued only as a defensive measure.

Nothing can be clearer than the present position of affairs: both parties are preparing for war, and will enter into it unless prevented.

An offensive and defensive alliance there can be no doubt has been entered into, or rather arranged between Prussia and Italy.

The National Verein at Berlin has held a meeting, condemning the forcible annexation of the Duchies as involving the danger of a civil war in Germany, and the possible intervention of foreiga Powers. That the Prussian proposal for a reform of the German Federal Constitution could only have a chance of success by the faithful observance of the Constitution on the part of Prussia herself.

President Johnson has sent a message to the Senate vetoing the Civil Rights Bill, for conferring on the coloured population the rights of citizens of the United States, declaring the bill unconstitutional, unnecessary, and anomaleus in its character, and that it would override the rights of the State; that its provisions were made to operate in favour of the coloured over the white race; and that its tendency was to revive the spirit of rebellion and arrest the progress of those influences which have been drawing the bonds of union and peace around the States.

General Lee has given evidence before the reconstruction committee that there is nothing like sentiments of hostility in the South to the Federal Government.

very warlike, and a panic has resulted in several of the Bourses, viz., Vienna, Paris, and Frankfort, and a very heavy feeling is more or less prevalent in London.

The Paris Constitutionsel last Sunday had an article said to be by Government authority, and even to have been written by the Emperor himself, but it was signed by M. La nayrac, to the effect that all Europe fears a political crisis, but that the policy of the French Government will continue to be one of neutrality:

It cannot be denied that Europe fears a political crisis. This is now more felt by the people than of old, on account of great commercial mingling of interests; but it does not depend on the French Government that such interests are affected by the possibility of war in Germany. France, whatever may be her influence, cannot prevent war always and everywhere. The Government of the Emperor did not fall to give its friendly opinion on the affair; of the Ribb Duchies, with a view of a pacific solution. In the German quarrel the Government has always maintained the attitude of strict neutrality, leaning neither towards Prussia nor Austria. France, as at the London Conference, has ever continued to desire a pacific solution of the Duchies question. The policy of France kaves her out of the possibility of being mused up with the conflict if war breaks out. There assurances will show how much energeration must exist in the public mind, which has witnessed within the last few days a sinter qui peut unworthy of a great astion. A committee of nine from the Federal Diet will, it is understood, be appointed to consider Prussia's proposal for a reform of the Federal Constitution; but it is also said that Austria, Hanover, Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Saxony, and Hesse Darmstadt have resolved to carry out a reform of the Federal Constitution; but it is also said that Austria, Hanover, Bavaria, Wurtemburg, Saxony, and Hesse Darmstadt have resolved to carry out a reform of the Federal Constitution; but it is also said that Austria, Hanover, Bavaria, Wurtemburg,

This meeting was followed on Wednesday last by one of the electors of the first electoral districts of Berlin, when the following resolution was adopted and supported by several of the Prussian Deputies.

"That a war for the annexation of the Duchies was unjustifiable, and that the Federal Diet was as little competent as Count Bismark to guard the interests of Germany and to ward off danger. Only a Prussian Government possessing the condence of the people, would be strong enough to solve both the questions of the duchies, and that of a reform of the Federal Constitution."

"Your Excellency will have received the copy of a despatch from Count Mensdorff, which Count Karolyi yesterday read to me, and afterwards placed in my hands. The ruilitary measures ordered by his Majesty the King have, as your Excellency has repeatedly informed the Imporial Cabinot, been adopted simply with a view to place us upon an equal footing with respect to preparedness for war, which, in the opinion of the King's Government, had become necessary, in somecuence of the movement of the corps a armée, which were distributed among the different provinces of the Empire in such a manner that in the event of war their approach to the Prasian frontiers would have been much accelerated. The Prasian preparations having been exclusively made upon that ground, I have to say that his Majesty the King is ready and willing to accept the proposition made to him, and to put an end to these measures of precontion as soon as the Imperial Government shall have recalled those measures which were the cause of our counter movements. THE UNSEATED MEMBERS.

This campaign in the Election Committee-rooms has hitterto bern disastrous to sitting members, an enough seats have already been lost by the Government to affect materially the fate of the pending division. Judging by the seandalous disclosures which appear daily for our columns, and remembering how meany of the worst cases are withdrawn frem public notice by a process known to the initiated as "pairing off" petitions, we must infer that venslip was at least as rife as usual at the last general election. The boroughs in which there is a large proportion of Freemen maintain, as we should expect, their lead eminence, but as class of constituency and no atratum of society appears to be wholly exemple from the taint. In the course of these inquiries several persons helding a social position above the natural level of orthery have openly confessed to selling their votes, and there is reason to believe that a corresponding advance has taken place in the average price of seats. This is a point on which it is hardly possible to procure trustworthy evidence. The accounts published by election auditors may be a certain safeguard, but many a member has cause to know that, long after these accounts have been settled, he may hear from his agent of irregular expenses out of pocket which his conscience repudiates but his sense of honour compelhim to repay. Of course he has duly cautioned the agent beforehand that no suspicious transactions to be allowed, and that nothing will induce him to pay a shilling more than appears on the official acoust the agent, beforehand that no suspicious transactions as to be allowed, and that nothing will induce him to pay a shilling more than appears on the official acoustion to the series, follows his own judgment and keeps his own course, indifferent broughs, and, inspite differe, of course, in different broughs, and, inspite dif the only question being whether the hands of their opponents will prove te have been cleaner.

There are those who, observing that illicit practices at elections are almost always carried on through agents, imagine that, if it were illegal to appoint an agent at all, they would be materially checked. The sufficient answer to this is that, as a matter of fact, corruption is rarely brought home to an agent legally or formally appointed. Such persons know too well what they are about to get within the meshes of the law, and leave the dirty work to be done by others, acting without any positive orders, but with a well-founded hope of liberal remuneration. The more the subject is considered the more impossible will it appear to keep pace by any direct legislation with the Protean developments of bribery. It will be cured when high-minded and honourable men cannot be found to become candidates for seats which can only be attained by bribery, as when the more respectable electors league themselves together, without distinction of party, to baffe and crush it. Till then, we can but apply partial remedies, always remembering that such an evil becomes more insidious the greater the penalty of being found out.

SHEET-STEALING IN INDIA.—A gontheman was once travelling through the Soonderbuns in "a native boat," that is 'to say, a boat surmounted by a matconstructed cabin. It was December, and as the cold north wind came cozing in through the matting, he drew his blanket over him on getting into bed. He awoke earlier than usual the next morning, feeling very cold, and wondering at the large amount of morning light that pervaded his cabin. To his dismay, in found not only that he was blanketless, but that a hole two feet square had been cut in the matting. While pondering these things, he made the further discovery, that the sheet on which he had lain was no longer on the bed. The inference was clear that he had had a nocturnal visitor. He had heard stories of sheet lifting before; but not till now, that he had himself bean successfully practised upon, did he believe that the feat could be accomplished. The scoundrel who covets the sheet under you, approaches your bedside armed with a feather, with which he gently tickles your ear. Accustomed as you are to the buzz of mosquitos, which, by the way, have a notable penchant for singing in one's ears, you only fidget a little in your sleep, and turning on your side, press the car that has been operated on, on the pillow. Immediately, the one half of the sheet thus released it relied up lengthwise close under your back. The feather is then again cautiously applied to the exposed car; you turn once more, and the other half of the sheet is released. One more tickle, adroitly administered, disengages the sheet altogether, and the rascal no doubt inwardity chuckles as he leaves you to your slumbet.—Chumbers' Journal.

FRANCE.

The Paris Constitutional, in an article on the German question, cites the views expressed by the principal journals of Austria and Fruesia upon the dispute between the two Powers, and says it is impossible not to conclude from them that the existing site of things is very serious.

But the fact must also be admitted (it adds) that neither Berlin nor Vienna whichs to assume the offensive; that each of the Cabinets dreads such a responsibility; and that this state of things is one of the guarantees of peace. Such is the real situation of Germany; but in presence of those difficulties, which we wish neither to exaggerate nor diminish, what is the position of France? It is very simple, and is the result of a wise and toreseting policy which may be summed up in one word—neutrality.

Politicians in Paris are all on the alert, and are easierly listening for the faintest indication of the intentions of the Euperor. Count Arese, the Italian war, is now in Paris, and had an interview recently with the Emperor Napoleon.

The Paris correspondent of the Standard writes—

"I can assure you that France is quietly getting an army of observation together. In this age of railways it is not necessary to concentrate a large number of troops, and subject them to the needless discomfort of the camp or the histonic. The garrisons of Metz, Thioaville, Luneville, Nancy, and Strasburg, are being quietly reinforced. The reserve is to consist of the Imperial Guard in camp at Chaicas. In previous years the troops moved into the camp of the camp at the end of May, or or the beginning of June; but now the asset is very different. The last and 2nd Regiments of Voligeurs are to march thinter in columns of battaliens in the course of a few day. It is stated that the foregoing reply of Prussia has created at extremely unfavourable impression in the government circles of Vienna.

Meetings against the war are continuously held in German and Prussian tewns, where the outrageous policy of the Blemark ministry is sharply demoneed. On April 15 a crowded meeting was held in Berlin, at which the following resolutions were unanimously voted:

1. A war between Prussia and Austria would be a national misfortune. 2. A Liberal Prussian ministry would alone command the general confidence required for Federal referm.

3. The ir habitants of Schleswig-Holstein have an abouteright te dispose of their own future, such a popular right forming the only moral and legal basis of any constitutional Government.

The Guide Regiment will proceed from Naples direct to Caserta. These movements are stated to have the object of preparing a second line to the two corps now being concentrated under General Claidini and General Durando, the first on the right lof the Po, at Belegna, and the second to the left of Piacenza. The field batteries have also received orders to march from Naples and Caserts direct to the camp of Bologna. Advices received from Venetia announce that Austria is making considerable military preparations in that province. Orders are stated to have been given to prepare quarters for the efficient of four Creatian regiments now on their way from Germany, and shortly expected at Venice. Information has been requested by telegraph from the provincial delegations respecting the localities available in the different towns for material. The Austrian army occupying Venetia at present consists of 75,000 men, this being the peace stablishment. In filteen or twenty days, it is stated, this irree could be doubled by calling in the soldiers on furfough.

The subject of ex-Fresident Davis's confinement has been again moeted. The House of Representatives has instructed the judiciary committee to inquire if there is probable cause to believe that Mr. Davis and others were implicated in the assassination of President Lincoln, or are quirty of trease, and, if so, what measures are necessary to bring them to a speedy trial. Bumours were current that Mr. Davis will be released on parole. Fears are entertained that he will not survive through the summer unless released from confinement.

The Times correspondent at Washingten remarks that, whatever may be the intention of the President in vectoing the Civil Rights Bill, the issue which the country accepts is, whether Corgress or the President is to order the policy to be pursued for the settlement of the difficulties before the nation. It is no longer a struggle between parties, and sense politicians begin to realise, perhaps for the first time, the enermous power which the founders of the constitution placed in the hands of the executive:—

It is the old battle of State Rights which is being fought over again. The Civil Rights Bill would render certain laws ungalory—it would even cause the imprisonment of Judges whe, in accordance with their oath, attempted to enforce those laws. Public feeling changes rapidly, and it seems to have been moving decidedly against the President during the last two weeks. It is upon this laste of power of Congress as against the President that the debate upon the bill has proceeded. The President or this Congress must succumb, and already it is proposed to protract the session throughout the year, so that the power of government may not be left wholly in the President will address his next measure the threats of impeachment may soon assume a definite form. Already the propriety of such as a definite form. Already the propriety of such as a definite form. Already the propriety of such as a definite form as soon as he was impeached his power would cease until the trial was over.

The Fenian excitement appears to be increasing in intensity. A Quebec despatch, dated April 12, says:

Large numbers of Fenians are gathering along the New Brunswick frontier, and threatening Campo Bello and St. Stephen's. Two hundred Fenians left Portland, Maine, on April 9, for Eastgort, on the Canadian frontier, and a schoener had been chartered to carry arms. Murphy, the prevident of the Toronto Hibernian Society, and five others, had been arrested in Canada, en route for Portland. Arms and annumition were found upon them.

On the 12th a Fenian convention was in seesion at Eastport, Maine. The lown was crowded with Fenians, and there were several Fenian vessels in the harbour armed with howitzers and 20-pounders. A sailing vessel escaped to sea, notwithstanding the presence of the United States marshal in Eastport. Arms and aumunition were arriving at different points along the New Brunswick frontier. The despatch adds:—

"Several British gunboats are off Bastport and Campo Fello, keeping steam up and portholes open. This attitude is said to have caused a hostile feeling among American sympathiers with the Fenian cause, numbers of whom, together with some British descripers, are joining the Fenians. A suspicious locking steamer, showing American colours had proceeded up Eastport River towards St. Andrew's. Communication between St. John's and the western towns on the British side was reported to have been cut off by the Fenians. The gartison of Campo Bello has been reinforced, and earthworks have been thrown up."

The Canadian authorities believed that this movement on New Brunswick was a frient to cover an attack upon Canada, in conjunction with gamboats from Chicago. At Toronto, Fenian arrests and the search for arms continued. The Toronto head-centre and others had been preliginarily examined before the magistrates.

News from various quarters reports that Austria has proposed to Prussia a solution of the warlike crisis by mutual and simultaneous disarmament. This is the result of some forty or fifty telegrams which appeared on the subject during the past week. reserson with moral cowardice in sending an anonymous communication to the authorities accusing Dr. Pritchard of nurder. It was proved that Dr. Paterson was not the author of the letter, but that he had given information to the real author.

On April 6th a general parade of all the troops in garrison at Cork was ordered for 11 o'cleck, when Major-General Bates, commanding the district, appeared with his full staff, and was received with a sulute. Serjeant Darragh was then brought forth from prison, and placed in the contre of the square into which the troops had been formed. Serjeant Darragh, it will be recollected, was tried about a menth ago, by a general court-martial at Cork. There were five prisoners to be tried, one of whom became insane during his confinement, and was sent to a lunatic asylum; a second was put aside, because he suffered from disease of the heart; a third, a private of the 20th Regiment, named Rose, was convicted, and sentenced to two years' imprisonment, but on the recommendation of the Commanderin-Chief, the Queen was pleased to reverse the sentence, and the prisoner was sent back to his regiment. Sergeant Thomas Darragh was charged, first, with having been guilty of mutinous conduct in Cork about April, 1865, in not reporting an intended mutiny of her Majosaty's forces that came to his knowledge; and, secondly, with having about the same time joined a treasonable and seditious compiracy called the Fenian Brotherhood. He was found guilty on both charges, and semtenced to be shot in the presence of the troops in garrison. The charges and sentence having been publicly read by Colonel Nortott, C.B., assistant adjutant-general he amounced that her Majosty applicated to commute the punishment to penal servitude for fish in one of the penal prisons. The prisoner was then removed. He is a line-locking man, thirty-four years of age, having been in the army in 1814. From this date to the time of his death, a period of upwards of 94. He was one of thoce enlisted in 1703 by the celebrated Jane Mar

The Sydney Morning Werald.

MONDAY, JUNE 18, 1866.

A WEEK in which for each consecutive day there has been a fall of ram is a nove experience, but having had that experience, we may conclude that the drought has at length fairly broken up. We have had snatches or ramy weather once or twice since the monoton of the dry weather was first broken into, but for two years there has not been such a con inuity of wet days as was experienced last week. We are so profoundly ignorant of meteorological causes at present that we can conclude nothing certain, but when a new sayle of weather sets in it seems reasonable to conclude that the causes of the long drought, what ever they were, have been thoroughly reversed We are not sorry to think that we have be good-bye to the epoch of drought. It has been a trying time to nearly all our settlers, and has a trying time to nearly all our settlers, and has greatly arrested the prosperity of the colony. The records that we possess of the past do not seem to lay the basis for any reliable theory. There are indications of cycles of dry and wet weather, but they are vague, and do not furnish any material for safe prediction. Nor are we able to trace the causes of our long drought, or the crief of the absent which being a whence the origin of the changes which bring a welcome change of weather

The late rains have fallen mainly along the coast courtry, as is usually the case with easering pales. But some of it has passed over toward the interior, and rearly all the principal agricultural districts have received a fair share. The wheat is by this time mostly in the ground, and be rain will give the young crops a fall start. So far, therefore, notwithstanding some un-(avourable appearances at first, that is now every parapeted of a good harvest, at any rate, for their who have done their part by a thorough totage of their fand.

There will be water, too, on most stations, and young grass enough for the lambing. We have probably heard the last, for a time, of the complaints about travelling sheep eating up grass for which other people pay rent. It is to be hoped, however, that the immediate supply of water will not lead to any slackening in the efforts that have been made to provide artificial water. The folly of depending exclu-sively upon natural supplies has been demon-strated; but as soon as the immediate want is removed, there is danger of procrastination in making further provision. It may be ten or dozen years before we have such another prolonged several successive years of dry weather. It is impossible to foresee what the seasons will be, and after the warning and experience we have had, they will be inexcusable who trust to the chapter of chances, and who neglect all reason-chapter of chances, and who neglect all reasonable preparation for another dry season.

Although the rain fell, more or less, for several days in succession, it was not so heavy as we have often known it. The bulk of it has fallen with a moderate gentleness highly favourable to its soaking well into the ground, but during the height of the gale it fell with great force. There was not enough, however, to cause any important flood. In the to cause any important flood. In the Windsor district a small portion of the low lands have been under water, but the damage done has been limited.

Heavy rains, even if we should have them this winter, will not make quite so much inter-ruption in our internal communications as they used to do a few years ago. Thanks to the labours of the Main Roads Department, we have hundreds of miles of metalled road which have hundreds of miles of metalled road which are not turned into a hopeless gluepot by a few days' rain, and the principal watercourses are spanned by bridges which are mostly above moderate water level. Drays do not have to camp so much on the main roads now for the freshes to subside, and it is not necessary to ferry mails and passengers across in boats. The railways, too, are all above flood level, and when the extensions now making are open, travellers will be taken a fair distance into the country without any detraction from the speed country without any detraction from the speed or comfort of their journey, whatever the weather may be. The difficulties which used to impede the exit from the metropolitan county are now conquered. The Menangle bridge affords secure crossing over the Nepean at the highest flood, and the bridge at Penrith, the ironwork of which has been put tegether with commendable promptitude, is now suffi-ciently far advanced to be beyond the reach of ciently far advanced to be beyond the reach of denger, and will before very long be available for traffic.

Although there has been very heavy weather at sea, maritime disasters have not been numerous. The principal misadventures have been two wrecks at Newcastle, a port always as mewhat difficult of access to sailing vessels in a routh-easterly gale. It seems not improbable that an annually increasing quantity of the coasting trade from that port will be carried on in steam vessels—a change which will diminish the liability to wrecks. The tendency of the trade seems to be in that direction, for time is noney, and where there is adequate facility for leading and dispatch, the employment of steam ading and dispatch, the employment of steam celliers effects a great saving of time.

The suggestion of our correspondent "Triton" that barometers used on our coast should be marked for colonial weather is deserving of attention, as is also his suggestion that when so marked it should be studied as that when so marked it should be studied as indication of coming changes. As marked for English weather they are certainly not true tell-tales, and for this reason they are less relied upon than they would be if the weather marks were translated into antipodean language. It is also worthy of consideration whether by means of the telegraph any coast signals could be introduced similar to those established in England. We have a long coast line from which to gather data. Before very long we shall have an unbroken line of telegraph long we shall have an unbroken line of telegrap from Cardwell, in the north of Queensland, and in the latitude of the Gulf of Carpentaria, down to Twofold Bay. All the principal ports along the coast will be in comrespectively. The coast will be in com-munication with each other, and a system of regular meteorological observation can be estab-lished which will soon tend to show how far it is possible to forward warnings up or down the coset, and to transmit indications of coming

THE departure of a vessel on a new line of steam communication with Europe is an event of much importance in every point of view. It marks the growth of the colonies by which this expense is undertaken; and it establishes another link of intimate relation with Europe, while it brings them into closer union with each other. The adoption of the Panama line has long been a philar of colonial diseaseign. As to its expense of colonial diseaseign. a subject of colonial discussion. As to its expediency, opinions are divided, as they always are upon every public question. It is imposible to say that the reasons for establishing this line are not combated by others of considerable weight. It must, however, be regarded in some of its aspects as tentative—as garded in some of its aspects as tentative—as admitting hereafter of revision and re-arrangement according as events may seem to point out. The altered centre of government in New Zealand, and the dissatisfaction to which this has given rise, as well as the postponement of communication with Tahiti, somewhat tarnish communication with Tabiti, somewhat tarnish the lustre of this enterprise. Still it must be recollected that we have to feel our way. We sate taking a new course, and have to find whicher the commercial strength of the colonies will sustain the undertaking up to the point of efficiency which it is desirable to secure. It is impossible not to look upon this line with interest as bringing to the test the value of con-stant intercourse with the United States. The stant intercourse with the United States. The time is evidently approaching when the expan-sion of the trade of this great Power on the Pacific will open new questions of European interest, but bearing very closely on the welfare of the Australian colonies. There are peculiarities of Australia which

There are peculiarities of Australia which nay have a powerful attraction to certain classes in America. It would be mere delusion to suppose that the colonial form of government, practically somewhat inferior to their own, will have any charm for them. If comocracy is all that is possible in Australia, it is inferior in many of its local aspects to the omocracy which flourishes on the banks of the Hudson. But there are other causes which may induce the American to seek new which may induce the American to seek new channels for his enterprise in these remote parts of the world, and, for good or evil, the influence of America in its political and com-nercial policy will be felt in the Australian

Of course it would be impossible to maintain team communication with America in the pre-ent state of the colonies, if it were not that New Zealand is on the line. We have great inticipations for that country, and consider the ceintenance of intercourse of much importance a both. It is perfectly true that the intermediate trade, as it may be called, will pass tway. New Zealand, as it develops its strength, will have its own commercial centres. There will be always there some things required by our population, and we shall have an overplus which may minister to the wants of theirs, and thus we may keep alive relations which will tend to stimulate a demandas well as supply it.

The apprehensions which once existed in reference to the Isthmus of Panama have, we presume, passed away. The railroad now unites the Pacific with the Atlantic, and it is only an affair of an hour or two. Modern precautions one would imagine will assure passengers from all the risks supposed to be formerly incident to that transit. Thus, between England and her Australian colonies there will be established a double line of communication, and if war should Australian colonies there will be established a double line of communication, and if war should intercept the one we may hope to have the benefit of the other. There is one great advantage in the Panama route. Throughout the distance it is not unreasonable to calculate on the fairest weather. A serene and passed the distance it is not unreasonable to calculate on the fairest weather. A serene and peaceful passage under a brilliant sky will have its charms for those to whom there may be something formidable in the specialities of other routes. Nothing can be more charming than the ordinary voyage from New Holland to the west coast of America. The passage from the other side is of course a question of only a few days. To Europeans it will look formidable, but to us it will only seem like a voyage from one colony to another.

Our position is very remarkable. Passing over regions on the right and on the left is habited by milling of the strength of the stren

Our position is very remarkable. Passing over regions on the right and on the left inhabited by millions of people, we have but a short step to make from sea to sea. The Isthmus of Suez will soon be eat by a great canal now in progress. It is said that a railway will be also carried through the Valley of the Euphrates, to leave Suez far behind, and to bring passengers within a much shorter distance to India, avoiding some of the most dangerous and disagreeable parts of the passage. The present passenger route of commerce will thus be comparatively deserted; and, with the discovery of fuel at reasonable distances, we may hope to see stear distances, we may hope to see steat come cation with Europe reduced to a cost which render it available to all classes of the render it available to all classes of the requi-lation who may desire (and who does not to visit the homes and sepulchres of their fathers. To obtain intelligence from Europe the Suer-line will long possess a superiority. A fer-hours brings news from every great city Europe to every important centre of Indi-commerce, and the last report of Europe politics and trade will be received at the moment of quitting the Indian shores. The items passing over the line from Adelaide will be diffused without delay throughout the colonies to the North. But the time may arrive when a still more rapid intercess. when a still more rapid intercourse will be established by way of Torres Straits. It is not unreasonable to suppose that at least so far as intelligence is concerned we may, one day or other, and that at no distant date, one day or other, and that at no distant date, have no other interruption than such as is necessary to manipulate the wires. During peace it is fortunate to find any abridgment of time in the passage from the colonies to England, but our security will be greatly enhanced by the fact that through various channels we may become aware of what is passing among the nations long before their swiftest ships can reach our shores. The color of the second second the nations long before their swiftest thips can reach our shores.

We wish the undertaking of the Panama Company all possible success. The genulaman—Captain J. VINE HALL—in charge of it-interests in this colony has been distinguished here, as everywhere else, by ability and fidelity. In arranging all the details of this service he has brought to it the experience possessed by few of his profession. He had the distinction of conducting the largest steamer that ever floated to ducting the largest steamer that ever floated to the commercial capital of the new world. He the commercial capital of the new world. He has now the honour of opening a line of steam communication with another part of the same vast continent and establishing another point of union between the three great divisions of the globe. We regret, on social grounds, to learn that he is about to leave the colony, and take up in the metropolis the affairs of the Cempany, where his experience will no doubt be of much advantage and contribute to the probabilities of ultimate success. ultimate success.

PREPENTATION.—Mr. Daniel Melhado, who after a priod of service extending over twelve years, has rainquished his connection with the Sydney Morning Hereld, on Saturday last accepted the invitation of his literary colleagues to a champagne lunch, which was prepared in the most recherché style by Mr. Williams, of the Metropolitus Hetel. The chair was occupied by Mr. S. Cook, and the vice-chair was filled by Mr. C. De Boon. After lunch the chairman, on behalf of the company, presented to Mr. Mrihado an elegantly wrought pencil-case of gold, setted from the stock of Messes. Mour STICKINO-VF —A correspondent states that on Wednesday, 6th June, the residence of Mr. Richard King, of Eulouite, was stinch up by three armed bushrangers, none of them disguised. "Journy the Whisperer," who was formerly a mate of Thunderbolt, was the captain; they took what money Mr. King had by him, also some stores. I he same evening, these socundreds proceeded on to Rocky Creek and stuck up Mr. John Aradelf's residence; cil three are no mounted on splendid horses, with their coats shining as it stable-fed, presenting a striking contrast to the unserbile horses supplied to the police in this district. Unless the police are better mounted, these men are likely to outine their depredations for a long time to come. I append a description of the trio:—"Jonnny the Whisperer" was nounted on a beautiful bay bore; Jonnay atanda about 5 feet 4 inches, grey eyes, with light hair rather inclined to curl, had a shight limp in his walk; wore cord breaches, long boots, light-coloured thick cost, new cabbagotree has with velvet round it; age about thirty. The second was a tall men, with blue eyes; mounted on a fine grey have, bearded WC on the near thigh of hind leg, supposed to belong to Mr. Coberoft; he wore dark trousers, light colour thick cost, dirty-locking Californian hat, long boots, dark cost, dark California hat; dark hafr and whiskers; at sands about 5 feet 8 inches; kept at a distance, with his hat over his yes; rote chemnt horse. The money taken from Mr. King consisted of a cheque drawn by Mr. Snape, of Wentelda, in Mr. King's favour, for £5 12a, dasie some time in January, Bank New South Wales, Sydney; four £1 notes, half-sovereign, one pair blankes, some tobacco, and other niscellaneous articles.

[FROM OUR CORRESPONDENT.]

FRIDAY MORNING.—FLOOD—It is my psinful duty to forward you the unwelcome intelligence that we are threatened with another flood on the Hawkeabury, Exactly this timetwo years it was that we were visited by that dreadful inundation which must long remain fresh in the memory of everyone who witnessed it, known as the great Jane flood of 1864. Although we have not much us on to approbend anything so disastrate, appearances are bed enough. The weather has been unsettled since Sanday last. On Tureday night it looked very threatening; and on Wedneeday morning it was evident that a heavy rain had set in. All Wedneeday and Thursday rain fell leavily, and throughout the whole of last night. A awall in the river was perceptible yearday afternaon, but up to 5 o'clock there was little more than a spring tide, though the waster was greatly field. During the night, however it must have itsen somewhat rapidly, as this morning the rover was bank high and the crees all flooded. The farmers, in a state of consternation, are preparing for the worst, and menty of them leave already brought their horses and eatile to the high lands. How soon, indeed, may our brightest hopes be cut off, and all that seems presperous suddenly air k before our eyes. The low lands between Windred and Morattly. JUNE 14.—Mrs. John Connell, the wife of John Connell who last assions was transported for fourteen years for sticking up a stre, with others, at Fexlow, was brought before the Court to-day, presided over by Mesars Steward and Grifflin, charged with being in possession of stolen totes. From the evidence of senior-sergeant Stapolton it appears that he apprehended Mrs. Connell at her residence, at Jern-batgully, on Thursday last, the 7th instant, from information received, and produced a bundle-handkerchief containing tea, some sugar in a paper bag, about two yards information received, and produced a bundle-handkerchief containing tea, some sugar in a paper bag, about two yards of grey colico, and a pair of stays; these things had been purchased at two different stores at Major's Creek, and four half-notes pasted together had been paid for them, the numbers of which did not tally, and were stolen from letters per the mail from Quesabeyan and Braidwood to Guulburn, on the 13th of March last, and that same mail brought the Cooms letters. The inspector of police, Mr. Orridge, who efficiently conducted the case, called Mr. William Henry, who deposed that he was store-keeper for Mr. Bistchford, at Major's Creek. That on Tuesday last, the 6th instant, shortly after 7 c'clock in the evening, he served a female with some grey callion, a bundle-handkerchief, and some tea and sugar; the articles now produced are the same; he knew the handkerchief by the way it was cut, and the sugar by the peculiarity in packing, and by the bag, and received in payment the half-notes pasted together; as for as he was able to say, he received themifform the prisoner, but she then wore a sun bonnet, and a white handkerchief tied over it and under her chin; in crass quence of what he heard he looked at the astes, initialled them, and gave them to a constable. Mr. Alfred Davis, storekeeper, at Mr. Burko's, at Major's Creek received from the prisoner for gueda two odd half-notes of the Australian Joint Styck Bank, pusted together, for goods edd on Tuesday, the 5th instant, about 7 o'clock; the pair of stay produced were sold to her; witness then described her dreas, which corresponded exactly with Mr. Henry's account of what she wore on that day. The prisoner, who had an infant at breast, asked the apprehending constable whether he knew where sold to her; witness then described her dreas, which corresponded exactly with Mr. Henry's account of what she wore on that day. CAPTAIN COOK'S MONUMENT.—A SAILORS' HOSPITAL,

CAPTAIN COOK'S MONUMENT.—A SAILORS' HOSPITAL.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sin.—In the Herald of June the 11th, there appeared a letter under the above heading, advecating the erection of a Sailors' Hospital as a monument to the memory of the celebrated navigator and discoverer of this portion of Australia—Captain Cook.

The description of monument will most undoubtedly depend on the amount of subscriptions and support rendered by the public, as alse the general wish or desire of the community, for whatever it be, the undertaking should be a rational one. Nevertheless, some basis should be proposed on which to act. Statues, in the open air, of great use, as a general rule, are abourfules, and it appears to me no monument to protunte the fame of that humans and distinguished man could be more appropriate than the one suggested by "X."

The memory of Captain Cook is, or should be, dear to every Australian; it should also be cherished with affection by every sailor, for, perbays, no other man ever did so much to am-librate the hardships and sufferings of a sailor's life. By Lis humane exertions and judicious treatment, that dradful securge, the scurvy, was nearly eradicated from his ships. In Hawkesworth's "Life and Narrative" I think it is stated—for I have not the work to refer to—that a high culogium was parsed upon him by the Lords of the Admirally for his exertions in that behalf. True, sailors are not subject new to such long voyages, or provisioned with so nuch salt meat as they were fit Cook's time; still, many of the benefits and comforts they receive are mainly owing to his humane exertions and representations.

No monum-nt, then, could better perpetuate his memory than a Sailor's Hespital—currying out, as it were, his views of benevolence and humanity in alleviating the distress and siskness incident to a seamon's life. And as so much respect was paid to Captain Cook by foreign nations, I would suggest it should be for the benefit of sailors of all countries.

I do not think there recommending the sug

JUSTICES' JUSTICE.

To the Editor of the Herald.

Sin,—I shall be obliged if you allow me a corner for a very few words in reference to C. S. on "Justices' Justice."

Having been a reader of the Sydney Herald from its commencement, and more or less acquainted with its propriets and conductors. I have not now to learn that its reports are in the highest degree reliable. It is possible that, in my anxiety to avoid prolixity. I have failed to exprese myself with perspicuity, although, to my mind, the language is sufficiently clear to show that I do not impugn the sistement that a rule nisi was applied for and granted. Neither do I presume to say either, that "the law and practice is just what it ought to be," or that "the Judges are wrong in supposing that there is any difference but ween the law as to such cases here and in England." But I do deny the existence of any "paculiar feature in the practice" of the megisterial Courts which can be changed by a simple decision of their Honors the Judges. And I say, further, that if it be the law in England that any private man may provecute another for any alleged offence whatever, without first having had his evidence tested by the crucible of cross-examination In a ministerial inquiry, long may such a law be excluded from our statute book.

PHOTOGRAPHIC FORGERY.

Sim.—I notice in your last Monday's issue an extract from a letter addressed to the Melbourne Argus by Mr. P. rry, the well-known shotographer of that city, upon the above subject, and with your permission I will add a few observations there... It is a fact, as Mr. Perry remarks, that the printing of bash notes in blue ink is no protection against forgery, and also that a note can be explict by photography, transferred to either stone or sinc, and then trinied by the editary lithographic process and the forger can thus obtain with comparative case a wanderfully accusate the estimate. There is no doubt that a see note thus produced could quickly be detected by the practised eye, from slight deicets in the nore minute details of the design, but after a little crumping. dictying, and some analogous process to give an aged appearance the resemblance would be sufficiently close to pass as genuine.

EVENTS OF THE MONTH.

(From the European Times, April 26.)
THE Speaker of the House of Commons returned to a duties after the Easter recess, but looked iil and hin, showing how seriously his late attack had told on a constitution. The probability is that this is the ast session in which Mr. Denison will rule the House of Commons.

last session in which Mr. Denison will rule the House of Commons.

The Church Establishment in Ireland formed the subject of a long and important debate in the House of Commons on the 10th instant, introduced by Sir John Gray, and was adjourned until a future day; but, engrossing as the theme is, it pales more immediately before the great question of Heform. The resolution introduced by the mover was in the following terms:—

"That the position of the Established Church in Ireland is a just cause of dissatisfaction to the people of that country, and urgently demands the attention of Parliament." The feeling of religious ascendency, apart from the pecuniary aspect of the case, was shown to cause intense hitterness amongst the Roman Catholic portion of the sister country, and Sir John Gray maintained that the Established Church, in a polemical as well as in a political sense, had been in a polimical as well as in a political sense, had been a failure. He quoted the statistics of the last ceasus sonary Church hat neither in the sense of a ministionary Church hat neither in the sense of a ministionary Church hat neither in the sense of a ministionary Church hat neither in the stablishment been a nuccess. He estimated its revenues at three quarters of a million; and the unequal distribution of the benefices was next pointed out. In 193 parishes there was not a single Protestant, and in the same parishes the Roman Catholics numbered 98,000. In upwards of 660 parishes there was only an average of 23 Protestants, and the cost of religious ministration was 537 per family per annum; while in 114 other benefices, contaming a Roman Catholic period 4178 for 600. The Church revenues represented 4178 for 600. The church revenues of the Church Revenues of the Church Revenues of the church Revenues of the church British colonies. For this humilitaing condition of things, the apology of Mr. C. Fortescue, on the part of the Government, was, that public in pinion in Great Pittish was not small miniority of the Establishment, to be majority. In his judgment, the discussion was calculated to smooth the way to an early settlement of the question. The Colonies of the Establishment of the present movement as an attack on property in Ireland and on the Protestant full of the population, while the members of the Establishmed the swarp of the Church Revenues of the Church Revenue of the State. But the state of the Protes discovery is so easy that those who cannot find the right way have only to blame their own stupidity. No doubt there is a freemasonry in all crafts, and the craft of speculation is not an exception. But we would rather produce the dogmas of others than lay down our own. "There is no security in the world," we are further told, "like that of a sound bill of exchange, and it is only of such securities that the mass of the assets of any respectable bank or un-count company should be found to consist. When this rule is observed, there is an absolute independence of all peril, since even in case of a run, or a withdrawal of deposits, whatever sum may be necessary can then instantly be obtained from any of the establishments that are undisturbed." The fact of extraordinary competition in the world of banking is met by the assurance that there is ample legitimate business for all existing establishments. With these plain facts to guide the managers of banks, it is simply disgraceful, assuming their truth, that failures and ruin are so frequent.

The "Adullamites," consisting of Lord Elcho and Messrs. Lowe and Horsman, are about to form a new club to be called the "Clarendon." Clubs are easily formed. There appears to be a rage for them, just as there is now a rage for new hotels. But this club is a new political symbol, and is to constitute the nucleus of a third party in the State. It is in this sense that the movement has a political significance. The "Clarendon," we presume, may be supposed to represent liberal statesmen who have been discarded—men who cannot act with the party of progress, and have too much self-respect to ally themselves with the anti-progressionists. They will be neither Whig nor Tory, neither fish nor fesh, nor, even as the common expression goes, "good red herring." All the discontented spirits, when virtue and talents have not been appreciated by the two greativels parties, will slock to the "Clarendon." It is a pity," says a London journal, "that the new club cannot have premises constructed

The marriage law in Ireland, which has been the subject of se much heart-burning of late, seems in a fair way of he ing satisfactorily settled. Mrs. Yelverton see Longw. th, is its most recent conspicuous victim, and if h & Serjeant Armstrong's bill should pass, we have heard of the last of such cases. He proposes to repeal the Act of 19th George the Second, which annumbe and marriages occlorated by any Papist privas between Protestant and Papist." In its presamble, the Sergeant's bill states that this canciment has led to a great public scandial and inconvenience, and he proposes that the repeal shall date great the state of January, 1867. The second in it shall affect marriages celebrated by a Roman Catholic priest, after the day and year mentioned, between two Protestants or between a Protestant and a Roman Catholic. The bill also provides the control of the control o

Principalities, and they protest against the election of the new ruler. These troubles at Jassy are attributed to Russian intrigue. It is declared that the rioters were not Moldavians, but natives of Little Russia, and when the plot failed they sought an asylum on Russian soil. To prevent the union of the Provinces and the election of a foreign Prince is the present policy of Russia, and hence the necessity of the Paris Conference meeting with as little delay as possible. Under the rule of Nicholas, Russian interference in the affairs of other countries assumed the dignity of a science, and the son in this respect treads in the steps of the father. Alexander is now engaged in cajoling the Porte with offers of assistance, and the Roumanians with entreaties to proclaim their independence of Turkey. It will be a difficult question to settle, for the interests are conflicting, and one of the chief acts is not honest. The attempt to assassinate the Cast has created a great sensation in Russia.

settle, for the interests are conflicting, and one of the chief acts is not honest. The attempt to assassinate the Czer has created a great tensation in Russia.

If Prussia really desires to preserve the peace of Europe, the opportunity is afforded her by the reply which the Court of Vienna has addressed to the remeatrances of England. Our Government is naturally anxious to see the two great German Powers settle their differences without an appeal to arms, and it will not be the fault of Austria if she is compelled to strike. Austria declares that she does not ask for an inch of land in the Duchies, nor will she accept it. She is, however, bound to protect them from the designs of Prussia, who wishes to annex them to her own territory. To the people of Schleswig-Holstein, Austria is willing to leave the issue. She will not dictate to them: and, if left to themselves, the inhabitants of the Duchies desire, by universal suffrage, annexatien with Prussia, Austria will be satisfied. This is a fair proposal, but it is one that probably Prussia will not accept. The answer of Count Bismark to our Government was of a very different kind—cold and haughty, indicating unmistakably that the Cabinet of Berlin is resolved to push matters to extremities. The Pederal Diet has adjourned, and a committee has been appointed to secure, if possible, a pacific solution. The last intelligence from Germany is more pacific. Five of the secondary States—Bavaria, Saxony, Wurtemburg, Baden, and Darmay is more pacific. Five of the secondary States—Bavaria lavents, it is said that Count Bismark has tendered his resignation, which the King for the present has declined to accept. This would seem to imply that peace may still be maintained; and Mr. Layard in the House of Commons has declared his disbelief in the rumoured treaty between the King of Italy and the King of Prussia.

The recent unsuccessful stack on the life of the Cear has swakened in Russia an amount of sympathy for his person which proves beyond all doubt that he is really popular with his reople. Honours and emoluments are to heaped upon the fortunate peasant who stood between the autocrat of all the Russias and a miserable death by avasasination; he is to be ennobled and endowed by public subscription with a house and land. There is something so horrible, so repelling in a criminal act of this kind, that even in the case of a bad or indifferent ruler, people are willing to condone his shortcomings; but where, as in the case of Alexander the Second, he has many qualities which dignify his exalted position, the national gratitude to Providence is sure to become effervencent. The attack upon the Czar has brought out all the loyalty of the serfs whom he has set free. This might have been expected; but it has also renewed the condiality of the Czar's relations with a portion of the nobility from which he had been estranged. Some uncertainty seems to exist about the social status of the regicide. He represented himself to be a peasant, but though wearing the outside garb of one, other portions of his dress negatived this statement, and the softmess of his hands and the refinement of his speech belong to a higher social position. He has hitherto maintained a dogged silence under examination, but his familiarity with the French language has transpired, which fact, incautiously revealed, disposes of the statement that he was a labouring man. By distorting his features he has prevented an accurate photograph being taken of him, and this leads to the belief that he may have accomplices in the work, whose safety he is anxious to promote. On him were found seditious proclamations, which the Russian authorities show no readiness to publish; and also a poison, supposed to have been intended for his own use. What if he should prove to te a Pole? If such be his nationality, he will not improve the position of his countrymen by his failure, nor would the violent death of the Czar have in the least advanced the position of unhappy P oland.

POLITICAL HOAXING.

(From the Times, April 23.)

We published on Saturday a leading article upon the relations of Austria and Prussia, in which, with much reserve, we announced that the Emperor of Austria and Count Mensdorff had resolved to withdraw the Austrian Ambassador from Berlin; that the Prussian Ambassador at Vienna had been informed of this intention, and would probably take his departure; and that the Austrian General had been ordered to withdraw the forces under his command from Holstein.

The authority for these statements was the following letter, purporting to have been written by the nephew and private secretary of Lord Clarendon, which reached us in an envelope with the impressed stamp of the Royal arms, and with a well-executed forgery of Lord Clarendon's signature, as if teratify the letter of his Private Secretary. The letter arrived so late as to render it difficult to verify its authenticityf even if there had been anything in its appearance or in the information it contained to excite suspicion. It has been for many years, and under many Administrations, the practice of the Foreign Office to forward for publication in telligence of urgent public interest such letters as are generally written by the private secretary of the Minister, and verified by his signature on the envelope. In this case, though on subsequent examination the impressed stamp has been found not to bear the words "Foreign Office," the envelope is of the usual official character, and the impressed stamp is that of the Royal arms.

The letter was a forgery. No such despatch had been received at the Foreign Office, no such letter had been received at the Foreign Office, no such letter had been received at the Foreign Office, no such letter had been received at the Foreign Office, no such letter had been received at the Foreign Office, what in some venial matters would be called a hoax, but what, where such important interests are concerned, is little less than a crime.

matters would be called a hoax, but what, where such important interests are concerned, is little less than a crime.

Lord Clarendon will, we are assured, take means to discover if any subordinate in his department has betrayed his trust, and we need not assure our readers that we shall spare no pains to bring to justice the author of such a fraud upon ourselves and the public:—

"Foreign office, Whitehall Gardens, April 20.

"Dear Sir,—I am desired by Lord Clarendon to mention to your information that he has received this afternoon a telegram from Lord Bloomied, at Vienna, dated I p.m. to day, stating that at an early mening Council at the Palace of Schenbrunn, the Emperor and Count Mensdorft, against the advice of some others, resolved to withdraw Count Karolyi from Berlin, and that an intimation of this decision having been made to M. de Werther, 64 was expected that he would leave Vienna this evening or tomorrow morning.

"Lord Bisomield states that Count Mensdorft, after receiving the Prusians naswer of the 18th, telegraphed a repetition of the Austrian demand of the 7th, in the course of the 18th, and received a treat reliand by telegraph on the 19th. This unfortunate resolution appears to be the coursequence of that refusal.

"The letter of recall was believed to be already despatched.
"An order was also to be sent at anoc te the General Officer Commanding in Holstein to fall back through Humburg and Manover, leaving only a few companies of troops in the Puchy.

"I cord Clarendon much regrets to send this untoward intelligence.

(From the Daily Telegraph, April 23.)

On Saturday morning the Times committed another of those egregious blunders for which it is establishing a conspicuous reputation. Just when the prospects of peace upon the Continent seemed brighter than they had been for some days past, our erratic contemporary thought it to astonish the public and disturb the money market by "exclusive intelligence" of the most bellicose character. We were told, not as a mere hearsay rumour, but as a fact, that Austria had recalled her ambassador from Berlin, and had ordered General Gablens to evacuate Holstein. If the statement thus authoritatively made had been true, war must have been regarded as imminent; nor did the journal in which the sensation news was given attempt to explain away the gravity of the tidings. On the contrary, in the article which conveyed them, reproachful warnings were given to Austria; and expostulations were addressed to her Government on the folly of provoking the rupture which it should be her first object to avoid. These expostulations had but one fault; they were not founded upon fact. Unfortunately for our contemporary, though fortunately for the rest of the world, the news turned out to be utterly baseless and erroneous. The Austrian Minister has not been recalled from Berlin, and no such orders as the Times alleges have been issued to the Imperial troops in Holstein. Where the information came from who was its author, or why De utterly baseless and erroneous. The Austrian Minister has not been recalled from Berlin, and no such orders as the Times alleges have been issued to the Imperial troops in Holstein. Where the information eams from, who was its author, or why it was thus rashly accepted, are mysteries with which we have no concern: but in the interests of English journalism, we must protest against this new kind of "sensational" writing. There are some subjects too important to be trified with; and a war, the possible development of which no living person could foresee, is sen of them. If the readers of the Times like to be told one morning that the Ministry has resigned, or that war is about to break forth in Germany, and to learn the next that it was all a mistake, we make no objection to so peculiar a disposition. But no English newspaper which claims to be respectable is justified in publishing news affecting the political and commercial interests of great countries, without some adequate ground for believing in its truth. In defence of its own character, indeed, we have no doubt that the Times will explain how it came to be so grievously imposed upon. The necessity of such an explanation must, it is true, be annoying to a paper which fornerly possessed a reputation for a sort of journalistic omniscience; but it is better that a blunder should be openly acknowledged than that the suspicion of wilful diahonesty should be incurred by silence.

Not only was the intelligence in question false in itself, but it happened to be entirely at variance with should be openly acknowledged than that the suspicion of wilful dishonesty should be incurred by silence.

Not only was the intelligence in question false in itself, but it happened to be entirely at variance with the tenour of the advices from Germany. For the first time since the commencement of the dispute, there seems valid reason to hope that the danger of war has been really averted, at any rate for the time. With the moderation which has characterised her recent polley, Austria has receded from an untenable position. However just in the abstract her demand for the demobilisation of the Prussian army may have been, it could not wisely have been pressed. So long as Austrian troops were massed in large numbers on the frontier of Silesia, and threatened Berlin, Prussis could not consent to place her army on a peace footing; and still less could she do so when her consent was demanded, as it were, under compulsion. It is true that her armaments had a hossile character which could not be fairly assigned to those of her rival; nevertheless, the very fact that the Southern Power was in the wrong made it doubly difficult for the Northern to comply with a demand couched in the terms that are said to have been employed by Count Mensdorff. Happily, wiser counsels have prevailed at Vienna; and the Emperor has now proposed the simultaneous reduction to a peace footing of his own armies and those of King William I. The proposition thus modified is so reasonable that Prussis cannot decline to accept it, unless she is resolved on war at any price. Happily even Herr Von Bismark can scarcely be prepared for such an utter disregard

FENIANISM.

(From the European Times, April 26.)

The Cork Constitution states that women are travelling from town to town in Ireland as Fenan emissaries,
On the 21st, the police arrested G. Connolly, a silk weaver in the establishment of Messrs. Pim and Co., William-street, Dublin, and found under his loom a box containing 1600 ride percussion caps, some ride builtets, and small percussion caps. At his residence were found cards or tickets connected with the brotherhood of St. Patrick. He was committed under the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act.

A number of Fenian prisoners have been set at liberty within the last few days in Cork, Dublin, and other towns, in concession to memorials on their behalf presented to the Lord Licutenant, substantial bail being required in every case. Those released are persons only who were taken into custody since the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act on no specific charge.

bail being required in every case. Those released are persons only who were taken into custody since the suspension of the Habeas Corpus Act on no specific charge.

A batch of suspected Fenians, six in number, was arrested in Dublin on the 13th.

No fewer than 120 Fenian "suspects," arrested under the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act, 70 of whom are from Dublin and other southern cities, are now in prison at Belfast. These prisoners are not obliged to work. They wear their own clothes, and their friends are at liberty to provide them with food, if they are so minded. They get, however, but one hour for exercise out of the 2s, and are in close continement for the remainder of the day and night.

Two men, named William Dunne and Michael Mooney, were arrested at Tullamore on the 9th. The baronies of Boylagh, Banagh, Tirhugh, and Innishowen, in the county of Donegal, have been under the operations of the Peace Preservation Act. The Freeman's Journal says:—"A letter, we understand, was received in town on the 10th, from a near relative of Stephens, who is at present in Paris, stating that Mrs. Stephens was with her husband in that capital, and that they were both in excellent health. The letter adds that Stephens had just left Paris, but his destination is not mentioned."

Referring to the case of sergeant Darragh, who was sentenced to be shot at Cork for Fenianism, the United Service Gazette says:—"We believe we shall be justified in stating that Darragh owes his life solely to the Queen's goodness of heart, as well as to her Majesty's full reliance on, and genuine appreciation of, the universal loyalty of the army. We have been informed that the Privy Council were unanimous in pressing upon the Queen the absolute necessity of sillowing the law to take its course, and that, so urgent were the remonstrances of the council, that her Majesty's full reliance on, and genuine appreciation of, the universal loyalty of the army. We have been informed that the Privy Council were unanimous in pressing upon the Queen the absolute

The Escape of Stephens from Richmond Baidermand, the Toth was issued the report of the Inspectors-General of Prisons in Ireland to the Lord Lieutenant with regard to the escape of James Stephens from Richmond Bridewell. The evidence divides itself into two parts; the first having reference to Stephens' escape, the other affecting the general discipline of the prison and the conduct of its officers. The report states that Stephens was under the charge of warder Coleman, in whom Mr. Marquis, the governor, and Mr. Gavin, the local inspector of the prison, had the greatest confidence. Of Mr. Marquis, 'who had always borns an unimpeached character for integrity,' the inspectors report "that they are compelled by a painful sense of duty to state that he has proved his entire incompetncy to meet the present emergency, and he exhibited a want of judgment and even of common sense, which, with regard to his antecedents, appears almost unaccountable." Suspicion, says the report, was so strongly directed towards the night watchman, Byrne, who was the only officer on duty after 10 p.m. patrol on the night of his escaps, that he was arrested by the detective police. In his room were found a copy of the Fenian oath and a padlock similar to the padlocks on No. 6 range, which corresponded with the locks on the cells of No. 9, where Stephens was confined; and it appeared, from the evidence of Mr. Marquis, that the keys of No. 6 padlocks would open the padlocks on No. 9. The inspectors conclude their report by suggesting eight alterations, and amongst them the removal of Mr. Marquis, which they believe to be indispensable for the good government of the gool in which State prisoners were ordinarily confined.

Fenian Prisoners in Ireland.—Returns relating to the treatment of prisoners in Cork and Waterford gaols confined under the Habeas Corpus Suspension Act have been laid before Parliament, in pursuance of orders made on the motion of Mr. Blake and Mr. Maguire. The governor of Cork gaol states, in answer to the inquiries demanded of him, that the professional advisors of these prisoners are allowed to have private interviews with them, without the presence of any prison officer, at any reasonable hour, and they are allowed to write to their friends whenever they like, and to receive books from them They have access to the exercise yards now for from five or six to seven hours a day, and when there are allowed to associate and converse with each other. The remaining hours are spent in their cells, which are light, large, and well warmed. They occupy separate cells; but, on the 24th March, when this return was made, the number of these prisoners having increased to seventy-seven, it was necessary that three should sleep in a few of the cells. The return from Waterford states that on 17th March there were only fifteen of these prisoners in that gaol. At first no one was allowed to see them, but the solicitor of one of

The Race.—The restivenees of Drum and Neroll caused some little delay at the post, but the signal was given to a good start. Pearl Diver, lying in the centre of the lot, at once showed the way, with Lincoln Green on his loft, and Eakring can the willy hand nearly abreast. These were closely followed by Lord Zetland, well up, with whom, though wide, were Peerses and Hollyfox, Drum on the extreme right being in a good position. The pace was slow to the tunhes, where the favourite, improving it, went to the front, and tock a clear lead of Pearl Diver, Nevoli, and Lincoln Green want on in pursuit of Bakring, who, however, contered on a this sease, and was by siengths; Pearl Diver a bad third; Hollyfox fourth, Lord Zeiland about two lengths in his rear, next. The Race.—After the horses had taken their preliminary canters they proceeded through the paddock to the starting post, where Mr. M'George took them under command. After a slight delay and one break away, the let were got in a line, and the flag fell to a beautiful start, Nukuheva (who whipped round as the others sped away) getting badly off, and being consequently left many lengths in the rear. The first who showed in advance was Shrapnell, who on reaching the brow of the hill beld a clear lead of Vandervelde, Mephistopheles, Out-and-Outer, and Ostregor, who followed in close order, with Delight, Brahma, Copenhagen, and Skirmish immediately in their wake, the rear division being composed of Xi, Endsleigh, Valiant, and Basquine, while Nukuheva was still several lengths in their rear. The pace was a cracker across the top of the hill to the three-quarter of a mile post, where several of the rearmost division dropped away, but the leaders underwent no material change, except that Mephistopheles, who up to this point had been pulling double, suddeally stopped, having, as it alterwards irganspired, broken a blood vessel. Vandervelde, soon afterwards appearing to be outpaced, gave way to Out-and-Outer, Delight, Ostregor, and Brahms, who headed Shrapnell, as they rounded Tattenham-corner, and the latter immediately dropped into the rear. Having fairly entered the struight the favourite, in the centre of the course, took up the running with a clear lead of Ostregor, Frahms, and Copenhagen, in whose wake were Skirmish and Vandetvelde. As they approached the distance Ostregor made an effort to reach Delight, but Kennyon, "loosing" the latter's head, came on with the race in hard, and won very easily by three lengths. Ostregor, compounding opposite the enclosure, was passed by Brahma, who beat him for second money by a length and a half; Skirmish, Vanderv

The Race,—The nine competitors assembled at the post at the appointed time, and after but a very brist delay the fing was lowered to a capital start. After going a few strides, Sister to Minnie, making the pace a cracker for her stable companion, rushed to the front, and took a clear lead of the others, the favourite, lying wide on the lower ground, being alightly in advance of the French filly, while in the centre of the course Lass o' Gowrie and Famunkey were conspicuous, with Mirella on the judge's side of the course. After going about half a mile the pace commenced to tell on Sister to Minnie, who revired, and Repulse took up the running, with Bayonette in close attendance; the latter, however, hung very much on the favourite, whom Cannon was compelled to ease to avoid a collision; and Bayonette, within 200 yards of the chair, got her head in front. The race from this point was reduced to a match between the pair, but the Franch filly hung so much towards the favourite that Grimshaw had great difficulty in keeping her stright, and was only able to right her when too late, as Repulse von a most exciting race by a bead. Mirella a bad thrift. The Maid of Masham filly, several lengths of, was fourth, Pamunkey next. Lass O'Gowrie at

The Race.—Seventeen starters faced Mr. M'George at the post, amid a crowd of people that almost defiel the efforts of the constables to clear the course, and after the usual failures the lot got away; the Clown soon taking the lead, Buckfoot making running for Dalby, and Redeap and Delight lying well with their horees. Three quarters of a mile from home Dalby wanto to the front, attended by Redeap, Delight at the same time running through his h rase and taking third place. But the race was over from the moment Dalby assumed the creath him, but the last year's winner weat in easily four lengths in advance of the-scarlet and white hoops, amid the great shouting of the ring. There were several caranities. Baragh broke his leg, we regret to say the first time road; Saladin pulled his foot off; and Delight, who if he had won, or even been near it, would have been "the coming horse," for the Derby, broke down.

RANDOM NOTES.

BY A WANDERING REPORTER.

XVI.

The township of Inverell was laid out only some nine years ago, whilst it is but within the last two or three years ago, whilst it is but within the last two or three years that it has risen into notice. It is now one of the most thriving and promising towns of our Northen interior, having around it all the elements for the support of a trading community. It is situated very nearly at the point where the Swan Brook and Middle Circk join together preparatory to emptying their combined waters into the Macintyre River. The flat upon which the town stunds is thus surrounded by watercourses, and, being what may be termed a part of the flood-bed of the river, is exceedingly liable to be inundated whenever that treacherous river, the Macintyre, may be forced by rains over its ordinary binks. This was about the first thing that struck me as I entered the town, and on mentioning my ideas subsequently to some of the inhabitants, you may judge what my autonishment was, when they, one and all, entirely coincided with me, expressed their conviction that one day the town would be swept away, and entreated me to make the matter public, and thus bring it under official notice. I must own that I was astonished to find that the site had been selected by a gentleman, at the time Commissioner of Grown Lands for the district, who has seldom made mistakes of this kind; and knowing the good judgment he has usually exercised in such matters, I am willing to admit the results.

for the district, who has seldom made mistakes of this kind: and knowing the good judgment he has usually exercised in such matters, I am willing to admit that possibly my impression may be wrong, and that the town will not be swept away, a la Gundagai. But appearances are very suspiciously in favour of my view, the more especially as the piceaninny floods of late years have sent the river water up to the floors of the mills, and cut off the communicatisn in the main street of the town.

But, letting that pass, as in the days of Noah they marry and are given in marriage, they buy and sell, they cheat and are cheated, business thrives, and it is only when the matter is mentioned that the people think at all of the precarious foundation upon which their town is built. There are not many houses in the township, and to recken them at one hundred would perhaps be to make them too numerous; but there are two excellent tims, and two really first-rate stores, besides minor establishments, and all of them do a continuous and excellent husiness. But the chief sign of the prosperity of the township is to be found in the two flour-mills that have been errected here, and which find continual employment throughout the year, and which often have to work through a great part of the night in order to keep up with the demands made upon them. The district round Inverell is one of the finest agricultural districts in the colony, not merely as regards soil, but with respect to its physical position. Its soil, however, is of the richest description, being, on the plains, the rich black fat loam peculiar to the Liverpool Plains district, and on the hill sides, where the finest cultivation is carried on, a fine red loam of wonderful richness and fertilising power. The great advantage of Inverell lies in its position. In the district and snows of the higher land, it is still sufficiently near to catch much of the rainfall which is there so frequent. Then, again, it extends fron the base of these hills westward down the Macintyre until Jying westward from it.

The amount of land that is now under cultivation in this district is something surprising, when it is remembered how are it is beyond our recognised boundaries of the property of the district has yellow the property of the district has yellow the property of th day waned, until at last, just before aundown, it was sill cloud, wind, and raiz; and I was glad to seek shelter in the hut of a shepherd upon one of the outstations of Paradise Creek.

It may, perhaps, not be uninteresting to you to know what a shepherd's hut and fixings are tike in the bush sixty miles north of Armidale. Wed, of the hut itself I cannot say much. It was of the usual sleb and bark construction, and consisted of four rooms, and made as complete as circumstances would permit. The rathers of the roof were decorated with hams, fitches, and heads of bacon, and there was a good store of maire, wheat, &c, piled up on benchesson one side of the main room, giving token of plenty in the eating department. The family consisted of the father, mother, and two sens; the sons attending to the sheep, and the father cultivating a good patch of ground that he had been allowed to fence in. He had a few head of cattle of his own, and there was an abundance of milk and butter, two articles that I had found by experience to be very scarce, and in fact altogether wanting upon some of the large cattle stations—though, as a general rule, a cattle station is about the last place to which a bushman would go for either milk or outter. The maa had been a good many years in the country, had accumulated some property in cattle and horses, and was what one might term tolerably well-to-do. I gained some information from him, from the labouers point of view, which I may probably make use of hereafter; but one thing I was rather astonished to find, and that was—that he, like many others of his class was no believer in free selection. I asked him how it was that with his stock he had not availed himself of the liberal provisions of the Land law. But he only shook his head, and said it didn't suit him. When he had a place, he added, it should be one of his own, and one that he could do as he liked with. This, however, is a phase of the free selection policy that I shall have to deal with more fully when I come to consider its effe

THE SEASON AT WOLLONGONG.—Since our last, Wollongong, in common with the coast generally, has been visited by a very severe south gale, vering to the southeast, accompanied by strong squalls of rain. We have experienced a complete transition from the mild genial warmth of summer to the black colds of winver within the past few days. The breakwater and coffer-dam, the two most assatiable points in our harbour works, have suffered in no wise from the gale: indeed, it was a most agreeable sight to see the huge breakers running outside, while all in-tie the harbour was perfectly smooth—Illawarrs Express of Thursday.
